LAW BANQUET WAS A MERRY, GLAD AFFAIR

Rousing Dinner at St. Lawrence Hall.

SIR ARTHUR THE GUEST

Notable Gathering of Guests, Staff, Undergrads. and Grads.

'Twas a merry party! Typical of the genuine Law Dinner, last night's undergraduate banquet at St. Lawrence Hall was from the opening note of the orchestra to the final response on the toast-list an entire and satisfactory success. With guests that were the best of good-fellows, with service and cuisine that were sans pareil, with toasts that were witty and pointed, and music that was the kind of harmony that just fits in at such a party—the Law Banquet was a gay affair. Some seventy-five diners gathered in the dining-hall at eight-thirty, and Chro's orchestra promptly struck up "Hail Alma Mater." Throughout the dinner, the orchestra rendered their selection of popular and college songs—as is well known, their harmony is the type that has the pep and the appeal that gives instantaneous liveliness to any party. The music, as a starter, certainly was all that could be asked for.

On the completion of the college hymn, the guests took their places at the large head table, with the undergraduates at a number of smaller tables about the hall. Among the guests of the evening were Sir Arthur Currie, the guest of honor, Mr. Chipman, Prof. Smith, Dr. Ira MacKay, Judge Surveyer and Mr. Walter Johnson, K.C. Scattered amongst the diners were several prominent graduates of the Law Faculty, including "Billy" Nicholson, last year's genial President of the Council, and Messrs. Ballantyne, Buchanan, Scott, Archibald, O'Halloran, Hughesson and John Kearney. In most cases, the representatives of the invited Sister Universities were unable to be present, but the presence of Irwen, of Queens, Gervais, of Laval, Quebec, and Gergoire, of L'Universite de Montreal, gave the banquet the desired intercollegiate aspect.

At 10.15 p.m., President "Bill" Lightall, of the Law Undergrad, proposed the toast to the King. Crowell followed this with a well-worded tribute to "Our Fallen Comrades," to which Principal Sir Arthur Currie responded. The keynote of Sir Arthur's speech that gave it instant popularity was his air of fraternity and good-fellowship that reminded the diners that the previous occasion on which he had been in St. Lawrence Hall was at the McGill Campaign. The daily reports and details of financial progress were announced in St. Lawrence Hall, and consequently as Sir Arthur said, the Hall was a place that was thoroughly McGillian from his point of view. Continuing his introduction, the Principal stated that no faculty of the University had made a nobler financial response in the past campaign than did the Faculty of Law—and that accordingly this fact would not be forgotten when the time of distribution of the funds came. Loud and hearty applause greeted this announcement, as an appropriation for a better Law Building is and has been ever since the campaign, a matter of great importance to the men in the present Law "chateau" on University street.

Commenting on the loss that McGill has suffered in the resignation of Dr. Lee, Sir Arthur said that Dr. Lee was a hard man to replace. The work that he has done for McGill's Law (Continued on Page 2.)

Owing to congestion on the Montreal-Toronto wire, the "Daily" representative at Toronto was unable to get a satisfactory call through giving the story of the game up to the time the "Daily" went to press (1 a.m.). Arrangements had been made to have a complete detailed story of the game in this morning's issue, but we trust our readers will appreciate that the reason for its non-appearance to-day is through no fault of the staff, but on account of impossible service on the long distance wire.

MEMORIAL FUND SHOWS PROGRESS

Arts Memorial Fund is Rising Steadily.

The Treasurer of the Arts Undergraduate Society was pleasantly surprised by receipt of a contribution from an R. V. C. student. A contribution given unsought always brings encouragement to the work of a financial campaign, and if only the men in Arts would follow the example of this donor the work of the collectors would be greatly lightened.

Thus far the campaign is progressing satisfactorily in all years, except the Partials. There is considerable difficulty in locating these men, and thus a special appeal is made to them to see any of the collectors or the treasurer as early as possible.

SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING OF STUDENT BODY

Important Matters To Be Dealt With To-Day.

NO LECTURES.

Dr. J. W. Turner to Give Plans For Coming Celebration.

The semi-annual meeting of the Students' Society, to be held at ten o'clock this morning, is especially brought to the attention of every member of the student body. Since the Governors have suspended all lectures from ten to one o'clock, so that every student may have an opportunity to attend the meeting, and in view of the importance of the business which is to be discussed, no student can find a reasonable excuse for remaining absent.

The Centennial Celebration, which is to take place next fall, is possibly the most important matter to be brought up this morning. Dr. W. J. Turner, representing the graduates, will give a great deal of information regarding the plans for the coming celebration. An active leader in his undergraduate days, Dr. Turner held a number of executive positions in student societies and organizations. His experience well fits him for his position of chairman of the Graduates' Programme. Every man who is expecting to return as an undergraduate next fall, and those who soon hope to be numbered with the alumni, can ill afford to miss this item in the business of the meeting.

The programme of the Centennial Celebration will occupy a large part of the early weeks of the coming session. The student body will have the privilege of playing a large part in the many activities included in this celebration, and those who return as undergraduates for the session 1921-22 may think of themselves as lucky students in one of McGill's happiest years. Many are already busy considering plans for this event, and schemes of student co-operation will be outlined and discussed at length, so that everyone may be prepared to take his proper part in the celebration upon returning after the holidays.

Upwards of three thousand graduates are expected to be in Montreal to take part in the Graduates' Reunion, which will be one of the features of the celebration.

Another very interesting matter which is of especial interest to many students is the question of a students' bookstore. This is a problem which has been brought up for discussion on many occasions. As yet it has never been satisfactorily solved. The present price of books, and the difficulty of securing many of them, is a problem which calls for serious discussion. A report from the committee assigned to this matter will be read and discussed.

Many other questions of importance to the student body will be brought forward. Various committees will report upon the activities with which they are concerned, such as Track, Swimming Club and the other clubs active around the campus. A final statement of the Students' Society will also be presented.

The eleven hundred who recently used their votes, and the odd two thousand who did not, should crowd the Union Ballroom this morning.

FOOTBALL PICTURES.

There are a number of Senior and Intermediate Football Pictures still uncalled for. Will those who ordered them please get them from the Porter at the Union as soon as possible.

The authorities have done their part by cancelling lectures. You do yours by being present.

All Out At 10 a.m.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1921.

LECTURES ARE SUSPENDED

This morning the semi-annual meeting of the Students' Society will be held in the Union. Inasmuch as the meeting was suspended from ten to one o'clock no undergraduate can have a reasonable excuse for absenting himself.

Matters of considerable importance are to be discussed, not least amongst them being the plans to be made regarding the forthcoming Centennial celebrations. This is a matter which is of the greatest interest to all students, past and present, providing as it does a unique opportunity for young McGill to become acquainted with "old McGill" in the persons of hundreds of former graduates and students who will be in Montreal for the event. Obviously it is the duty of every present student to help demonstrate the fact that McGill is still as live and energetic an institution as in the palmy days gone by, and that old-time spirit and "esprit de corps" are still potent factors in our college life.

Besides this important subject, there will be discussed the affairs of the several organizations in the University. This gives an opportunity to every student to see how the present executive have discharged their duties during their term of office, and how the funds of the Student Society have been administered. This is something which every student ought to know, and at this morning's meeting figures will be given which will serve to show how the various clubs have prospered.

So far this year the attendance at Students' Society meetings has been very poor. This results in some cases in action being taken or motions being adopted which are not endorsed by the majority of the student body. This is obviously an undesirable condition and can only be remedied by a large and representative attendance at these meetings. It is to be hoped that the turn-out this morning will exceed all previous records and demonstrate that the students are fully alive to their responsibility.

School, his efforts to make it primarily a college for legal education for the law students of the province, and his simultaneous efforts to broaden out its scope to make it also a national institution—that in part was the Principal's tribute to Dr. Lee. He added that, thanks to the recent dean, the foundation was now laid that would give McGill the opportunity of eventually building up a law school with a world-wide reputation.

Going on to emphasize the expressions "Alma Mater" and "Alumni", Sir Arthur said that it was the fostering care of our Alma Mater that influenced the mind of all. He held with the ancients that education was a process of nurturing—and our Alma Mater was the foster mother that nurtures each undergraduate on to manhood and citizenship. "Alumnus" is the finished product, the son of the symbolic foster mother of the one who has gone to her at his advent at college. Our Alma Mater nurtures the student until he is the strong and finished product—an Alumnus. Sir Arthur put out the appeal to the men who were about to graduate—he reminded them of the reciprocal nature of the motherhood love of our Alma Mater. Our Alma Mater has nurtured and cared for each undergraduate—now the student must return his share of the duty by a virtuous discharge of citizenship. The highest purpose of the University is to inspire each student to citizenship—to direct and regulate the functions of modern complexities of citizenship—to help men and women play the game. Putting this challenge to the graduating class, Sir Arthur wished them all success in the post-college days, and the best of luck in their careers. Hearty cheers for the principal followed his well-taken speech. The balance of the toastlist was as follows:

To the Faculty—Proposed by M. Hayes, responded by Prof. H. Smith.
To the Bench—Proposed by C. McCaffrey, responded by Judge Survever.

To the Bar—Proposed by C. H. Dobell, responded by Mr. Chipman.
To the Graduates—Proposed by J. Robinson, responded by Mr. Buchanan.
To Our Sister Universities—Proposed by J. Chisholm, responded by Gregoire (U. of M), Gervais (Laval), Irwin (Queens).

To the Ladies—Proposed by J. Lons, responded by F. D. Genest.
During the evening a pleasant item was the entertainment offered by the well-known local elocutionist, Mr. Bevans Giles. Without any demeriting detail, with the evening an entire session of fraternity and good-fellowship—all in all the 1921 Law Banquet will go down in history of the Law Faculty as a memorable event.

TOOKE'S ARE CLOSING THEIR EAST END STORE.

Before the Easter going home season starts some of the boys who want a new outfit should come down to the R. J. Tooke Store in the East End. They are selling semi-ready suits at half the price label in the pocket—exactly half.

The reason for this sale is that Tooke's are closing out their East End Store, at the corner of St. Christopher. Dupuis Freres have secured the entire block between the two streets.

INTER-CLASS INDOOR BALL LEAGUE OPENS

First Game in High Gym. Yesterday.

SCIENCE WINS.

Science '23 Scores a Win Over Commerce '22 in One-Sided Game.

The Inter-class Indoor Baseball League, which is composed of first and second year classes, got away to a good start yesterday, when Science '23 scored an easy victory over Commerce '22. Lea and Smallhorn did some heavy hitting for Science, while McKinnon and Steine seemed to be the only men on the Commerce team able to wallop the ball.

The game got away to a slow start, with each team scoring a single point in the opening inning. In the second inning Science gained a slight lead, although Commerce was still showing up well. The fireworks started in the third inning when Science opened with a fierce onslaught, knocking the ball all over the gymnasium, and chalking up thirteen points. Feeling that they had gained a safe lead, they were satisfied with seven runs in their following turn at the bat.

Throughout the first four innings Commerce, with the Science men running away from them, were held to a point-an-inning pace. In the fifth, however, they showed that they still had a comeback. Getting their eyes on the ball for the first time, they grouped a number of safe hits, and six Commerce men crossed the plate in succession. They showed signs of holding the rally through the next inning, but seemed unable to stand the pace, Science slowing them up without any difficulty.

In the absence of "Shag," the game was efficiently handled by H. Wyatt Johnston. The umpires, Allan and Read, of Arts '23, also proved efficient, and kept the game well under their control.

The batting orders were as follows:

HOW THE CHINESE VALUED EDUCATION.

For centuries past the people of China valued education, but there are many signs of their having awakened to appreciation of and desire for education along very broad and modern lines. Wealthy men are freely contributing of their means to establish schools and colleges. One of these, Mr. Chen Cheh Kan, a prosperous business man, who started as a poor boy, and afterwards became possessor of many millions of dollars. One day he said to himself: "A million is quite enough for me, why should I keep so much?" So he gave five million dollars to found a University in Amoy, and persuaded a friend of his to give three million.

Furthermore he has announced, that he will contribute his entire property, so as to establish a real large University in Amoy, China. His total contribution amounts to $14,000,000—which is the largest contribution China has received from any one man for educational purposes.

Tell-Tale Love-Letters.

A young pre-legal student of the University of California is being sued for $100,000 by a co-ed of the same university for breach of promise. The case will be brought before Warren Gregory, prominent attorney of San Francisco and a member of the Board of Regents. The defendant was indiscreet enough to put his declarations of affection in writing. It might be interesting to note, in passing, that at the above mock trial, the tell-tale letters will be read in full before the court.

At The University of Pennsylvania.

Stephen Leacock, famous Canadian author, has been secured to address the Arts Association. The date for the lecture has not been definitely set, but will very likely be in the first week of April.

Mr. Leacock has written many humorous books and short stories which are widely read in the United States. Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, director of the Department of Physical Education, is a personal friend of Mr. Leacock's, and it is chiefly through his efforts that the noted writer will speak here.—The Pennsylvanian.

Loyalty.

The Status of Illinois Women.

"Everywhere I have gone about the state meeting and talking with alumni," said Robert Zupke, in a talk about the spirit of Illinois alumni, "I have found the women taking as great an interest in the University as the men. They seem to feel even more keenly the disappointments of football defeat and to be even more excited over our victories."

Such a spirit of loyalty among the alumnae is a natural outgrowth of the position women hold at the University.

The women came later than the men, it is true, but they are not usurpers. They have every reason for feeling it is their University, as well as the men's, and that is what binds alumnae closely to their alma mater.

In these days when the men of Cornell are making an effort to drive the women out of the University, Illinois women are led to a feeling of greater loyalty for a co-educational institution which is co-educational.—The Daily Illini.

A Faculty Glee Club.

That the college professors are making decided efforts to associate with the students away from the lecture-rooms, is becoming more and more apparent. At the George Washington University, faculty have organized themselves into departmental baseball teams, and are also considering the idea of a Faculty Glee Club to compete with student organization.

Disguised as Co-Eds.

A rather unusual sensation overshadowed the Campus of Ohio Wesleyan University when it was discovered that twelve men in women's attire had attended a strictly co-ed show in the women's dormitory. The intruders were not discovered until the show was nearly over and the men escaped without being recognized.—The Sagebrush.

Columbia's New Track Captain.

Walter Higgins, United States junior two-mile champion, has been elected captain of the Columbia University track team. Higgins succeeds H. J. Hudson, who has just left college.

Harvard Wrestlers Beaten.

The Harvard University varsity and freshmen wrestling teams were defeated by the Yale varsity and freshmen in their dual meets at New Haven. The Eli men won by a count of 14 to 11, and the freshmen by a count of 22 to 3.

In the varsity match neither team succeeded in securing a fall, all of the results being scored on the decisions of the judges. The feature match of the schedule was the 135-pound class, which was won by Capt. Patrick Mallon, '21, of Yale; the defeated man was J. F. Stearns, '22.

Penn. Beats Princeton.

The University of Pennsylvania varsity basketball team defeated that of the Princeton University at Weightman Hall, Philadelphia, in an intercollegiate Basketball League game by the score of 33 to 22. Capt. D. J. McNichol, of the Pennsylvania team, was easily the star of the game; he was himself responsible for 25 points on the score-board.

Dartmouth Won From New Yorkers.

Dartmouth College won a well-deserved victory when they defeated the Columbia University Basketball team in the concluding game of the season by a very narrow margin; the final score was 26 to 21. F. X. Heep, '23, showed very well for the victors; he scored three of the seven goals from

COMMERCIAL SOCIETY HELD BIG MEETING

Election of Officers Took Place.

NO OUTSIDE SPEAKER.

McKinnon Elected President By Acclamation For Coming Year.

That the Commercial Society is one of the largest and most prominent at McGill was proved last night by the manner in which its members met in the Union for their second to last gathering. Nearly every Commerce man was present, and brought with him the lively and enthusiastic spirit of a general discussion, and for this reason the executive departed from their usual routine, by not inviting an outside speaker to address the members.

Instead, many problems of vital importance to the future success of the society were discussed, after which the election of officers for the coming session was proceeded with, the results of which are as follows:

ACCUSE BROTHERS

Theft of Cigarettes From C. P. R. Case Tried

George and Wilfrid Whitten, accused of having stolen cigarettes from a freight car belonging to the Canadian Pacific Railway, on November 30th and valued at $150 appeared in the Court of King's Bench this morning and pleaded not guilty. McLeann, a checker in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway at St. Henry Station, stated that he checked two cartons of cigarettes consigned to firms in Joliette, Que., and that the car was sealed before leaving the station. Mr. D. Hutchison, checker at Place Viger, where the car was examined, stated that according to his shipping bills, there were two cartons of cigarettes short when he checked the contents of the car.

James Coleman, a Canadian Pacific Railway investigator, stated that he found nineteen boxes of cigarettes in a store occupied by a Mrs. Hofner, who gave him the information that the two Whitten boys and an other boy, came to her and offered to sell the cigarettes to her. Coleman located the two accused and they took him to a field off Notre Dame Street West, where he found the two empty cartons. He then arrested them both, but the other boy, had disappeared and from information he later received, this boy has left the country and returned to France. The case is continuing.

In the case of Gerald H. Bruce, his counsel, James Crankshaw, Jr., appeared before Justice Monet this morning, and Bruce's case will come up before Judge of the Court of Sessions without a jury.

REFUSES OATH

A self-styled "Anarchist-Communist" in the dock at Surrey Quarter Sessions objected to the form of oath administered when giving evidence, says an English despatch.

He was invited to go into the witness-box on his own behalf, and the clerk proceeded in the usual way to read the oath containing the words, "Sworn between our Sovereign Lord, the King."

Prisoner declined to utter these words or to repeat the oath in any form, remarking, "I don't think Almighty God has anything to do with his court."

On being sentenced to six months' hard labor for being in possession of housebreaking tools, the prisoner, Arthur Rogers, exclaimed, "I can do that easily, as I was for five years on the Brighton Road."

Aviation And The Universities

IN GREAT BRITAIN.

The study of aviation in the British universities has received considerable attention recently, partly owing to the fact that two chairs of aviation have been established, at Cambridge and London, respectively, by means of private gifts, and partly because the whole subject is creating much interest at present on account of the help given by the government in the form of a subsidy granted to civil aviation of £60,000 for the coming year.

University authorities have been asked regarding their attitude toward aeronautics as a subject for study in the colleges. Some of the replies have been decidedly encouraging, while others show that they do not view the subject as important and express no desire to afford facilities at all for its study. In the majority of these cases, lack of money is given as a reason for lack of interest.

Cambridge has a chair of aviation endowed by Sir Francis Mond which is occupied by Prof. B. Melville Jones, whose policy it is to provide a certain amount of specialized aeronautical teaching intended principally for the men who are already studying for the general engineering tripos. This teaching takes the form of a series of lectures delivered by the professor during the second and third year of the course, the lectures culminating in a voluntary examination in which aeronautics is an optional subject. In addition to the ordinary fundamentals of aeronautics, the allied subjects of meteorology and navigation are dealt with, but wireless is not included, as it is included in the lectures on electricity. Aeronautical research has received little attention at present, but will be taken up later when the whole subject has been thoroughly organized. Structural problems and survey by aerial photography will be two of the matters dealt with. Messrs. Boulton & Paul, one of the leading British aircraft construction firms, are cooperating with Cambridge in this matter, but practical flying cannot be undertaken owing to the lack of an aerodrome and machines, but students are encouraged to visit the R. A. F. at Duxford aerodrome near by.

The University of London, on the other hand, does more post-graduate work than Cambridge, and facilities are afforded for the use of the National Physical Laboratory at Teddington. The City and Guilds Engineering College, one of the colleges of the university, is prominently identified with the aircraft movement in London. This department of aeronautics is, at present, financed by the State, and may be considered almost the chief centre of aeronautical research.

Turning to Oxford, one finds absolutely the reverse of the position at Cambridge and London. Noting is done; the subject of aeronautics has not even been considered as a possible branch of study. In fact, all the university authorities have done is to issue an edict forbidding members of the university to fly or to take any active part in aeronautics at all.

At the smaller universities in Great Britain, attention is occasionally paid to aeronautics. In some cases this is entirely due to the initiative of individual members of the staff. Thus at St. Andrews, Prof. A. R. Fulton, who was formerly officer in charge of a department of the Air Ministry, and is now professor of engineering, has arranged for a short course of lectures on aeronautical subjects from some of the acknowledged authorities in England. A test bed for air engines has also been laid down in the laboratories, and a great deal of encouragement is afforded by Professor Fulton to all those interested in the matter. At Leeds too, a course of lectures under the title "Aerodynamics" has

DINNER HELD BY SCIENCE UNDERGRADS

Annual Banquet Was Held Last Night.

GREAT SUCCESS.

Colonel Alexander Macphail, Guest of Honor, Addressed the Students.

The annual banquet of the undergraduates of the Faculty of Applied Science is over. To all those students who attended this function was provided an excellent supper menu and a first-class cabaret performance. At the end of the banquet some of the students were wondering whether they liked the supper or the entertainment best, while others were hardly in a position or condition to know. In fact, there were those who were not quite sure that anything of any importance had happened between seven o'clock and the time they crawled into bed. One thing, however, is sure, and that is that the function was a decided success from beginning to end. Cheers greeted the entrance of the guest of honor, Col. Alexander Macphail, and the Professors of the Faculty. The entrance of Dr. Frank Adams, Dean of the Faculty, was the occasion for more applause, as was the rising of Col. Macphail to speak to the undergraduates.

The Colonel felt that it was a privilege to address the students, but was rather put in the shade by the artists who had appeared on the floor just before he rose to speak. Their beauty was greater than his own, and his dress was somewhat superfluous when compared with that of the fair ladies who gave an exhibition of dancing. He was exceeded in passion by the gentleman in the silk shirt and velvet trousers, whose singing delighted his audience. Col. Macphail then discussed the question of Education. The best education is required by college professors and other men who are required to impart their learning to students. This requires far more than a good knowledge of the subject.

The guest of the evening resumed his seat amid much applause, and three cheers were given for him by the students. Shortly afterwards the remaining acts of the entertainment were put on, and these received a cordial welcome. The undergraduates then gave vent to their feelings by joining in the McGill yell, and a very successful evening was brought to a close by the playing of "God Save the King" by the orchestra. This latter rendered an excellent jazz programme during the course of the evening, and altogether the banquet was a most successful affair, at which about one hundred members of the Science Faculty were present.

been started by Mr. G. Brodetsky, the reader in applied mathematics. The neighboring University of Sheffield has arranged for lectures to be given under the auspices of the Royal Aeronautical Society, and at Bristol the Department of Automobile Engineering is dealing with the construction and testing of aeroplane engines. At Birmingham, where the authorities are in sympathy with the idea, the question of finance prevents anything being done. Edinburgh is also sympathetic, but is doing nothing as the authorities consider that it would be a serious mistake if any considerable number of the universities attempted to specialize in aeronautics. Manchester is frankly adverse to the whole idea, the vice-chancellor stating that "Aviation is not a subject at the university, and I think I need not do more than say that it is impossible for us for financial and other reasons to undertake it at the present time in the University of Manchester."

Taking all things into consideration, one sees that despite the attitude of the general public, there is a distinct desire on the part of the universities to encourage the study of aeronautics. In many cases this is due to the fact that professors and lecturers have been connected with the R.A.F. or Air Ministry in various official capacities, but it is lack of money which prevents much work being done. It should also be understood that while the theoretical and scientific side of the subject is vastly important, facilities should also be granted for practical work both on engines and machines, and in the air as well. For post-graduate work far better results would probably be achieved by men who had studied the scientific side of the question, and then gone into the air to prove their own theories, than would be done by merely sitting at a desk or working tests on the benches of laboratories.

PLAN SMOKER FOR RETURNED UNDERGRADS

Attractive Programme Drawn Up By Executive.

TO-MORROW NIGHT.

Will Take Place at the Army and Navy Veterans Hall.

To-morrow night the Returned Men's Association will hold their smoker. It is hoped that all returned undergraduates will be able to attend. This function is to take place in the Army and Navy Veterans' Hall, at 602 St. Catherine Street West, on the floor above the Venetian Gardens. The executive have been busily engaged in completing plans which should make this affair a pronounced success.

The management of the Venetian Gardens have very kindly offered the services of their Hawaiian Orchestra at intervals throughout the evening. Music will also be supplied by a number of deservedly popular campus artists. Mr. Jimmy Rice and Mr. Clarence McQueen have also promised to take part in the programme. Those who have been fortunate in hearing these gentlemen know how much their presence will add to the success of this gathering. The dry ones are assured that the beer will be of the finest quality—and free, gratis, for nothing. It looks like a good chance for a heavy shot before we go over the top in the coming spring offensive—and may there be no casualties, and many honors in the ration bag.

The tickets are only fifty cents, since the treasurer is fairly well supplied with funds. They may be obtained from class representatives, or bought at the door on Thursday night. Everybody out and make this smoker. The first entertainment the McGill returned men have held, one that will end with exams and other more necessary worries forgotten for a night.

Ingenious, But—

By J. H. EDELBURG, Arts '24.

(With apologies to the School for Teachers, Macdonald College.)

It happened on a bright September afternoon, when my sister—an example of sheer enthusiasm—had just returned from a public school, where she had begun to teach just two days ago. My sister Una, whom I nicknamed "Ivy", with reference to that well-known creeping plant, on account of her frequent lateness, disposition had graduated last June from that well-known normal school separated from our glorious city by some twenty miles, and now, was to the day she had begun to teach the kiddies of the second year in one of the poorest districts of our city.

On that particular afternoon, Ivy found me in my room struggling over a problem in trigonometry in which subject I had a sup, the latter being caused by the good times I had while my sister was away at Macdonald's University studying how to give a poor kid the hiffs.

"Oh, Harry!" Ivy exclaimed with ecstasy, "I just—"

"What's the matter, now, lost your job, after all those years of hard labor and perspiration?"

"Of course not, you idiot. I merely—"

I must admit that I was completely astounded, imagine me, a member of the Commerce class being called an idiot, accordingly I was going to tell her several things, but to tell the truth, I could not, Ivy was looking at me with a bright smile spread all over her face, the kind that had old Father Sun beaten by a mile.

After what seemed to me a period in physics lab, Ivy again exclaimed—

"I've got a bright idea—"

To tell the truth, I knew, by experience, everything there was to know about Ivy's bright ideas, so I picked up my trigonometry and yelled out—

"Is that all you have? And I, like an ass, began to think that you found a purse full of money. Now, I'll give you one more chance, get out before you taste some of the pleasantness of this trig, henceforth, evaporate!"

"Very well, Harry, I won't let you on to this new idea of mine, and with that and a shrug of her shoulders Ivy left the room."

There is no need to express the relief I felt when I heard the door swing on its hinges and produce several melodious notes including sharps and flats, which fitted the atmosphere of the afternoon very harmonically. With trouble out of the room, I returned once more to the cosiness and, and sat absorbed in them for a very long time.

It was twilight when I awoke from the nightmare of the cosecants and realized that night was coming along rapidly. I remembered that I had a date on with some friend of mine, whose name I won't mention. (Ada does not like publicity). The tinkling of church bells was heard in the distance, and I was beginning to feel as sleepy as Irving felt when he honored Westminster Abbey with his personal presence.

It was then when I decided to go into the library to place the trig back into the bookcase.

Upon entering, my eye was astonished to find Archibald, that poor fish who fell for my sister worse than Caesar ever fell, sitting on the sofa with Ivy holding her hand.

"Getting pretty dark," I remarked very sweetly, "might put the lights on for a change—"

"Ahem, er—and how are financial conditions, Hawwy, auld top?"

"Broke."

"How will a deuce, suit you?"

After I received the two-spot, I decided, like Hennie, to make a quick retreat. Ivy was commencing to make eyes at me, I noticed in the darkness, and all was not well. I immediately applied myself to the colored mans interpretation of the well-known explosive "TNT" switching on the lights of the library as I passed out. That incident proved very fortunate for Ivy and Archie, for as I got outside, my father was just in the act of entering the house, when I asked him for a fiver. I got it, but that did not put him in a very good humor, and should he have discovered Ivy and Archie in the same manner in which I did, there would have been something doing.

When I returned home it near midnight, but that fact had nothing to do with Ivy and her beau; they were still sitting on that same sofa. This time, however, Archie did not hold my sister's hand. Dad was sitting on one of those comfortable arm chairs, smoking his pipe and reading, which accounts for all. I noticed that Ivy mumbled something which appeared to be far from polite. This made me sorry for poor Archie; Ivy was all that her nickname implied, and was the last person anybody would like to get into a scrape with.

The next day kept me busy outdoors. I had been invited, some time ago to visit a friend, and for that reason it was not till eight o'clock in the evening when I returned home. Approaching the house, I noticed from a short distance that it was brightly illuminated. I was not informed that we were going to entertain guests that night, and being in my daily attire I felt timid about entering the house. But, by some kind of inspiration, I felt that my presence would be required on this particular night. Accordingly, after a few minutes of hesitation, I made a bold front and entered the house.

Entering the receiving room, I lost my breath as I noticed some fifty kids—a prize collection of specimens of humanity—seated around the table. To give you a full description of these kids would be utterly impossible, for I have neither the utterance nor power of speech. However, this one thing must be mentioned: Their nasal organs were working overtime, which difficulty they overcame by employing their coat sleeves and our serviettes.

My sister Ivy, dressed in one of her flashy evening gowns, was at the head of the table, delivering them an oration which would surely have made Cicero look like an infant crying for its bottle. The following is an example of it; consider it carefully, and comment:

"In order that you obtain a fair knowledge of the Bon Ton and good manners, it is essential for you to make yourself well-acquainted with the use of the knife and fork, as well as the spoon. According to statistics, there are many people who employ the knife instead of the written law of the fork."

That is quite sufficient for an example. A speech like that to a bunch of kiddies in the second year in public school. Well, to make a long story short, after Ivy had displayed her oratorical abilities for something like an hour, the kids began to grow impatient. Yawning seemed to be a feature of the evening. While my sister was gabbling away at a fair rate, I noticed that two urchins, sitting on two opposite sides of the table, were making designs upon a certain piece of cake which appeared to be bigger than the ordinary pieces. I later found out that the names of the two kids were Izzy O'Brien and Patrick Goldstein.

After my sister had displayed her oratorical abilities for another hour, the kids grew even more impatient. Occasional grunts were heard, of which the following is an example: "That coffee is cold," "Gosh, but she can gab worse'n sis," "Gimme some cake."

At last, after what appeared to me a period in physics lab, my sister concluded, and bade the little ruffians to eat. Immediately, Izzy and Patrick made a dive for that piece of cake. Personally, I felt sorry for all the poor kids. I knew that Ivy made the cake, and by bitter experience I learned that her cake was similar to a dose of rat poison. But to return to my story. The kids were fighting furiously, with Patrick having the edge of the two.

As I was interfering to separate the kids, one of Izzy's coat buttons caught on to the embroidered table cloth, and the kids rolled on the floor, dragging the cloth with them.

Broken dishes galore. . . Imagine the rest for yourselves.

The next evening I found myself walking into the parlor to look for a book, when I found Archibald sitting on a sofa with his arm around her waist. Funny how that boob gets closer to her all the time. After leaving the room with a two dollar bill in my pocket, I heard the following conversation between the two:

"And I'm sorry that you didn't see the manner in which the dear children acted last night. I knew all the time that I would improve the social condition of the world by teaching the poor kiddies table manners."

"A most ingenious idea, I say."

"Ingenious," said I to myself, "but . . ."

ALBERTA'S EDUCATIONAL PLAN.

In view of the increased settlement of Alberta, and the rapid expansion resulting, the question of education is receiving wide consideration, not only by the government but by others closely interested. This question, as regards elementary schools, has been closely studied for the past year by various organizations and individuals, at the request of the Minister of Education. This request was made with the idea of gaining the views of the largest possible number of people, and reorganizing the curriculum of the elementary schools to best suit the need. All arrangements for this reorganization are now complete, and the initial work will be in the hands of a widely representative committee of 15 persons.

YALE BREAKS RECORD.

Yale's varsity swimmers broke and tied an intercollegiate record when they defeated the Wesleyan University team 44 to 9. The Yale varsity relay team, composed of W. L. Jelliffe '23, C. D. Pratt '22, R. F. Solley '22, and Edwin Binney Jr. '21, made a new 160-yard relay record of 1m. 16-4-5. The old record was 1m. 22-1-5. Edwin Binney Jr. tied the intercollegiate record of 19s for the 40-yard dash. The record was made by Capt. E. D. Ries '20 of the University of Chicago last year.

She is neglecting an opportunity to gain experiences that are worth more than a hundred sewing circles or a thousand pink teas. If she is not invited, then let her collect her own friends and baggage and plan her own trip. Prove herself!

Only a few years ago I would spend weeks at a time in the woods and never meet a fellow creature, let alone a woman. Nowadays, people are more alert to the joys of the open road and the tangled thickets, and I must indeed go far if I would shake altogether clear of human contact. And now the canoe that rounds the point holds a woman as like as not, a woman dressed for the part, a woman in homespun or corduroy, with a kerchief around her neck and a tan that will prove impervious to cold cream. She will slide her light craft dexterously alongside and exchange the latest backwoods news, the depth of water in Long Reach, the length of Crow portage, the presence of a big herd of moose in Brown's clearing, and what not, with never a word as to New York or Ottawa or the outcome of the latest elections.

They are not all veterans, of course. Many are still in a state of transition. One day my ears caught an uncouth sound, and looking up from my fire, I spied three young ladies rounding the spruces swathed and weighted in the "very latest thing" in camp clothes. Their khaki suits were neatly pressed, their bow ties were neatly tied, their high boots were neatly laced, and their bloomers were so long and voluminous that any skirt but a hobble would have felt free in comparison. They had made an attempt to discard the hideous garment of civilization and had only succeeded in getting themselves more hopelessly entangled in the mazes of feminine fashion. However, it was an attempt.

Styles for the Wilderness.

How should a woodsman dress? you ask. It will depend, of course, on where and how she is going. If her travelling is to be by canoe with open portage trails, during July and August, she can "go light." That is, her costume will consist of light khaki breeches or knee pants and shirt to match, golf stockings and cowhide or doekskin moccasins. This Peter Pan rig is as picturesque as it is convenient. Some women, however, prefer loose drill trousers, or even a short, loose skirt, and for ordinary travelling there is nothing against them.

To "rough it" in comfort during spring or fall, however, the feminine camper must be prepared to copy her brother's styles, and don heavy breeches, wool-lined "mackinaw," water-proof boots and thick wool socks, or perhaps a "slicker" or oilskins. Her gauntlets can always be fringed, her sweater becoming and her hat as picturesque as she pleases, so that no matter what the conditions she can look "presentable" at least.

What of the winter? The fine points of winter camping are only beginning to be known. When the snow is drifting five or six feet deep in the open and three feet along the trails and silent places, then is the time to oil shoe-packs and snowshoes, slip into blanket coat and breeches, blue or scarlet or white, wool mitts and cap, hood and scarf, and like away into a white and green world. Anyone can snowshoe after a few trials, and such walking is difficult to equal. In some parts of the Northern States and Canada the women prefer skis to raquettes, exulting in the down-hills and even the crusted levels. But when it comes to fluffy snow and close thickets, the Indian invention more that holds its own.

New Kitchen Customs.

Be it understood the customs as well as the costumes of the woman in the woods are very different to her city sister. She either ceases to be the cook and chairwoman or shares these prosaic duties with her male companion. Most men seem to prefer to handle the pots and pans over the camp fire, leaving the unavail-

PHILOSOPHERS' LAST MEETING NEXT FRIDAY

Dr. Rene du Roure To Address Club.

IS MCGILL PROFESSOR.

Topic: "The Salient Idea of Modern French Report."

The Philosophical Society of McGill University will hold its last general meeting on Friday, March 18th, at 8.15 p.m. sharp, at Strathcona Hall. Dr. Rene du Roure, professor of French literature at McGill, will address the Club on the very interesting topic "Les idées directrices de la pensée moderne de la France."

France has always produced her great men in all branches of study and thought. It was France who led the world's political thought during her revolution in 1789, and then, as now, she is leading the world's philosophical and political thought. But to-day her thought is no longer typified by revolutions and anarchy, but there are a great many manifestations which tend towards reactionism.

France has produced her philosophers, and amongst her moderns we have Professor Bergson, whose ideas have caused such an uproar in philosophical circles.

The political moves that France has made of recent years are indeed very interesting to every student of political science.

The ideas on political economy that originate in France are highly important to every student of economics, and French philosophy was, and always will be, interesting and exceedingly instructive to every philosopher.

Professor Rene du Roure is well known as an orator of mark and distinction. To those who have heard him speak, to those who have enjoyed the boundless enthusiasm which he puts into his speeches, there is no need of further comment; but to those who have not yet heard him we can say that an interesting and highly enjoyable evening is in store for them on Friday next at 8 p.m. at Strathcona Hall.

A discussion will follow the address and all interested are invited to attend.

FOOTBALL IN SPAIN.

An unexpected obstacle to the spread of football and other field sports in Spain has arisen in the shape of protests from pedagogues and other language purists, who are fulminating against the use of English words imported with the sport.

They assert that the constant shouting during the game of such exclamations as "shoot!", "goal!", "pass!" and "hurray!" in English is having the effect of spoiling the pure Spanish of the rising generation.

They demand the substitution of Spanish terms for "footballista", as the player usually designates himself, and for all other hybrid words forced into the Spanish language by the followers of sport.

ing of packs and spreading of blankets and collecting wood to her; men whom nothing could induce to enter the home kitchen under civilized circumstances. Then again she claims her rightful place in either bow or stern of the canoe; her right to clear impassable trails with cunning axe-strokes; her right to build serviceable fireplaces, shelters and lean-tos; and, perhaps most important of all, the right to carry her share of the burden on the portage. She has a pack that fits her shoulders and a tump-line of the exact length, and even with 50 pounds on her back can balance along fallen trunks and scale the steep embankment with the poise of the savage.

Just as men sometimes get carried away with an excess of enthusiasm to "conquer" a bit of difficult wilderness rather than to enjoy it, so women, too, may make the same mistake. Once upon an evening in September in the Algonquin reserve a fast-propelled canoe came to rest before a cabin already occupied by the author's party. It contained a wiry woman, her brother and husband. No, she would not stop the night, but would accept a few hard-tack and a pound of bacon with gratitude. You see they had come up from the Muskokas on such-and-such a day and must be across the Algonquin before Saturday. They were bent on "doing" the trip in ten days, and, of course, were travelling light, so light indeed that they were hungry all the time. But what was that compared to speed? If they did not delay longer they would arrive at the next portage before dark. "Good-bye and thanks awfully." The canoe quickly disappeared around the next point, three paddles going like ducks' wings. We wondered what they would have to talk about when they got home. If they kept a diary it would read like a railroad folder, all dates, distances and stops! The five of us (and three were women) shook our heads a bit self-righteously and rejoiced that our ambitions took another tack.
